Save the date CLIMATE SMART AGRICULTURE MISSION

In cooperation with the PSLO network of the World Bank and with the support of the African Development Bank

Mark your calendars! The Private Sector Liaison Officers (PSLO) Network is organizing a mission the week of May 14, 2018 focused on climate smart agriculture. The mission is specifically designed to provide various opportunities for relevant companies.

- Take part in business-to-business meetings with local companies of the sector.
- Initiate relationships with the project officers responsible for agricultural sector projects.
- Understand opportunities, challenges, where your competitive advantage lies and how to create synergies and access IFI financed projects.

This mission is designed for:

- Consulting firms, individual consultants, training institutions and universities.
- Companies with technology that:
 - increase productivity (high yield crops and improved nutrition security)
 - enhance resilience (reduce vulnerability to drought, pests)
 - reduce emissions

- enhance resilience (reduce vulnerability to drought, pests)
- reduce emissions
- Prospective sponsors of private sector projects.

Please join us if you wish to:

- Identify specific opportunities to market your technology and services.
- Learn what types of projects and how the International Financial Institutions provide funding in this sector.
- Discover how projects are initiated and developed and how to learn about future projects through high-level networking.

The mission will also include optional programming in Ghana.

Sub-sectors and programming will be refined according to expressions of interest. To express interest or to make an enquiry, please contact one of the organizers listed below. Spaces for the program will be limited.
